ADR Training Department of Consumer and Business Affairs, Dispute Resolution Programs Act (DRPA) training, 120 hours, 2019; University of Southern California Mediation Clinic training, 40 hours, 2019
ADR Style "My approach is very cautious and collaborative. I actively listen to the parties, I caucus at the very beginning and once more throughout the process if I deem it necessary. I am very Socratic in the way I ask questions, parties often aren't able to see resolve through anger. In my opening statement I make it known that I am there as a neutral to facilitate a conversation. I let them know that if at any time through the process they need to think or take a break to discuss with other parties, they may do so."

Southwestern University School of Law, JD 1994

ADR Training Pepperdine University Caruso School of Law Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution - Mediation: The Art of Facilitating Settlement (40 hour course completed in October 2023, multiple faculty members)

ADR Style "I use a holistic approach to mediation that is personalized to the parties and their counsel. I do not believe in a 'one size fits all' approach, but rather will use a combination of approaches that is best suited for the parties and their approach. While I do engage in an evaluative approach, my best results have been achieved when using a facilitative approach, aiding the parties to reach decisions on settlement themselves."

Education J.D., Yale University, 1980
B.A., Reed College, 1976

ADR Training Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution of the Pepperdine University School of Law, 30 hours, 1995

ADR Style "Although I originally intended to mediate in a facilitative manner, and still do at times, especially with sophisticated parties and counsel, over the years my mediation style has moved more toward the evaluative style. This is particularly true in bankruptcy mediations, since the evaluative style takes maximum advantage of my substantive knowledge in the area."

Education J.D., Lincoln Law School of Sacramento, 1983
B.S., California State University, Northridge, cum laude, 1977

Hundreds of hours of additional mediation training through SCMA and other providers
ADR Style "I have extensive experience successfully mediating adversary proceedings in bankruptcy. I have mediated over 1,000 cases total. I start off facilitative until I have ascertained which approach will work best depending on the personality, temperament and needs of the parties. After I have earned the trust and confidence of the parties, I usually transition to an evaluative/directive approach. I will always seize the opportunity to implement a creative solution. I rely primarily on caucuses and anticipate a concluding joint session where the parties fine tune the terms of the settlement agreement."

B.A., University of California, Irvine, 1975
ADR Training Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution of the Pepperdine University School of Law, 30 hours, 1995
ADR Style "The approach depends on the issues, personalities, conflicts and motivations involved. Separate caucuses will usually be helpful. Because the parties have lawyers, mediation will tend toward an MSC/VSC model. My role is to (a) encourage the parties to identify/express their true goals and to see the risk/reward/cost of further litigation, and (b) bring to bear the experience, knowledge and creativity of everyone in the process."

However, I try to maximize global participation. I try to stress that the main benefit of mediation is that the parties control the process and determine the outcome."

B.A., University of California, San Diego, 1986
ADR Training Conflict Management Institute & The Community Mediation Program of Santa Barbara (Judith Rubenstein), 30 hours, 1997
ADR Style "I assess and approach each dispute on a case by case basis. I first take some time to learn about the parties and their goals. If I determine that a caucus would be helpful, then I initiate a caucus; if however, it appears that caucus would be counter-productive, then I do not conduct one. My approach is collaborative, with an emphasis on the empowering the parties to actively participate and contribute to the process of resolving their dispute, so that everyone feels invested in the outcome. I can be either evaluative or facilitative, depending on the circumstances of the particular case. I am flexible and adapt to the particular circumstances of each case. I tend to be able to determine relatively quickly what approach or method will work best depending on the personalities and goals of each party."

ADR Training Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution of the Pepperdine University School of Law, Advanced Mediation Training, 13 hours, 2005; Basic Mediation Training, 30 hours, 1995

ADR Style "My approach works best when both parties really want to settle. I quantify the high and the low values and then focus on the one or two items that will move the needle to achieve settlement. I am selective in the cases I take (do both parties really want to settle?) and therefore enjoy an 85% success rate. I also think outside the box and on occasion come up with inventive solutions that were not previously in play. Conversely, my approach is least effective when the request for mediation is made merely to satisfy the judge's decision to send the matter to mediation, but one of the parties is recalcitrant and will only settle on his or her terms. I use a white board to lay out options, and I keep the parties and their counsel informed about the progress in closing the distributive value gap."

ADR Style Different processes/approaches are effective depending on the nature of the disputes, nature and preferences of the parties. If significant settlement discussions have already taken place, then caucusing may be appropriate; if not, the probably start out with the parties in the same room, then caucus as necessary. ADR Training Straus Institute for Dispute Resolution, Pepperdine Caruso School of Law - 40 hours - completed March 24, 2023
ADR Style I evaluate and approach each dispute on a case-by-case basis. I take some time to learn about the parties and their goals and to involve the parties and their attorneys as much as possible in the process, seeking to understand their positions and their goals. If I determine that a caucus approach would be useful, I initiate a caucus; if it appears that caucus would be counter-productive, then I do not conduct one. My approach is collaborative, seeking to empower the parties to actively participate and partake in the process of resolving their dispute. I make an effort to make sure that all participants are invested in the outcome. I use both the evaluative or facilitative methods, depending on the circumstances of the particular case. I am flexible and adapt to the particular circumstances of each case. I attempt to determine quickly what approach or method will work best depending on the personalities and goals of each party. I work to getting the support of the attorneys to work with their clients in a continuing effort to bridge gaps and achieve a workable resolution.

ADR Training "Mediating the Litigated Case", Straus Institute of the Pepperdine University School of Law, 42 hours, 2000- 2001

ADR Style "Evaluative. I tend to be confrontational with the parties to the mediation and give them an understanding of the weaknesses of their respective cases, so as to bring them closer to resolution. In some cases, a more collaborative approach will be appropriate where continuing business, family or other personal relationships, or collateral legal issues/proceedings exist. I tend to be very tenacious with the parties to a mediation and, if there is a resolution, always insist on writing to document the terms before the mediation is concluded. In certain cases, it is appropriate to resolve part of the matter and leave it open for further discovery or resolution of ancillary issues. As to General Sessions, I don't find them very useful, other than for introductions. The majority of the work gets done in caucuses."
